J. C. Penny Announces Plan for Store Here

The announcement of the opening in this city of one of the well-known chain of stores conducted by the J. C. Penny Co. is contained in a letter received this week from the J. C. Penny Co. The letter outlines a few salient points in the history of this concern.

The J. C. Penny Stores were founded on April 1, 1902 by James C. Penny. During the first year of business the gross business amounted to $28,898.11. Twenty-six years later the J. C. Penny Co. has become a nation wide institution, with over a thousand department stores in 47 states, and continually opening stores in new territories. The gross business of the concern this year will be approximately $190,000,000.

In their letter the J. C. Penny company says:

"Every J. C. Penney Company store, in a sense, is a local enterprise. The manager becomes a permanent resident in the community. Local clerks are employed. The manager plans his advertising, and is alone responsible for the amount of copy placed in the media and the time of insertion.

"Buying for our stores is done by our managers through the central offices. You can appreciate the tremendous purchasing power of so many stores. It assures lowest possible market prices. Our company operates on a close profit basis.

"We never hold 'sales.' Our policy always is to mark merchandise at the lowest possible price, consistent with market conditions, rather than at an exorbtant selling price which must later be reduced for disposal."

An early morning fire Tuesday morning in the Five Points section of South Redwood resulted in the destruction of a number of small buildings and four automobiles. The total loss is estimated at around $5000. The fire was in the rear of the boarding and rooming house on El Camino Real near Willow street, operated by G. Mar-

The flames for a time periled the boarding house and many of the occupants hurried to the street to avoid what appeared to be a fire in the bulding. The boarding house is occupied chiefly by Mexican laborers and is in a thickly populated section of the Five Points section.

PIONEER RESIDENT DIES IN PALO ALTO

By D. E. O'KEEFE

In the untimely death of Joseph F. Greer at Palo Alto last Sunday there is removed from earthly scenes a pioneer whose maternal ancestors resided in this county during missionary days and who a century ago owned vast tracts of land on the banks of the San Franciquito creek, where now is located the city of Palo Alto made famous Tuesday by the election of Herbert Hoover president of the United States.

After an illness of but a few hours Mr. Greer passed away at his home on the Embarcadero, just east of Palo Alto. His estate faces on this thoroughfare, a highway in the days of the early padres where vast pack trains passed bearing upon their backs the hides and tallows and other products of the section, receiving in return the merchandise of Spain brought to the Presidio in San Francisco. How eagerly the Spaniards greeted each arriving caravan bringing cheer and messages of encouragement to the new nation on the shores of the western sea.

Joseph Greer was born at Woodside sixtyeight years ago. His father, Captain John Greer, settled on the peninsula in 1849. With a companion he came down the bay from San Francisco in a small row boat, reaching the mouth of the San Francisco creek that empties into the bay he rowed up the stream for about a mile and a half reaching a point where the city of Palo Alto is located An Indian hut was sighted. An Indian maiden was at the door, startled at the approach of the whitemen, but being assured that they meant no harm, they were invited in and befriended by the Indians. Later Greer went further up the creek and settled on a tract of land.

Some time after his arrival on the banks of the San Francisco creek he met a beautiful Spanish maiden, formerly Miss Mary Louisa Soto, who became his wife. She was born and raised at the Santa Clara Mission. On the morning of the wedding the couple saddled their horses and galloped down to Carmel Mission, a distance of 112 miles, where they were married by one of the old padres of the famous mission, the favorite mission of Jenipero Serra, its founder.

Captain Greer played a prominent part in the early settlement of the peninsula. He was the justice of the peace at Woodside but held court in San Francisco, for the county was at that time a part of San Francisco. Greer rode a big black horse to the city every morning and came back every evening over the Colma hills. In his later years the captain delighted to tell of the pioneer days.

Joseph F. Greer attended the grammar school at Woodside. The land on which the school was erected was given the district by Greer and is known as the Greersburgh district Early in life the deceased became a blacksmith and for many years conducted a shop at Menlo Park. While there he married Miss Haley a beautiful belle of San Francisco, whose parents had come across the plains in a covered wagon in 1849. The bride was born in San Francisco. The wedding in 1894 was a big event. The celebration took place on the Greer ranch at Woodside. It was a county affair. Hundreds from far and near attended. The whole countryside was there. The barbecue was in charge of well-known experts. Under the wide spreading trees young and old danced to their hearts content. The event will never be forgotten by those who attended.

Greer had aspirations for the sheriff's office at this time and at once plunged into one of the memorable campaigns for which this county was noted thirty years ago. He was young and ambitious, making a thorough canvass of the county but went down to defeat at the hands of Philip McEvoy, who held the office one term and with this prestige was enabled to make the hurdles defeating the doughty Greer by only a few votes. Both were native sons, both ambitious and each had a big following. The battle was the hardest fought contest of any in the history of the county.

Greer never again entered the political areana contenting himself with his blacksmith business. Some years ago he moved to Palo Alto, there spending his declining years on his estate, surrounded by his loving wife and four children, two sons and two daughters. Mr. Greer was an affable, care-free man, with a strong love for old friends whom he grappled to his heart with the strongest affection. He delighted to tell the tales of the early history of this section as imparted to him by his mother, who knew the history of the peninsula and the missions of the state as no other one did.

The funeral on Tuesday morning from the Catholic Church of Palo Alto was largely attended by old-time friends and neighbors of the deceased. In fact the funeral was a reunion of the pioneers of this vicinity who had come to pay their last tribute of love to the deceased.

The Rancho de Raimundo, the vast Greer acres in this county, a portion of which now comprises the Bear Gulch Water Company's holdings, was made by concession on August 4, 1840 by Governor Alvarado to Lieutenant John Coppinger. The boundaries of the properties were fixed as follows: bordering on the west the Sierra Morena Mountains, on the east the De Las Pulgas Rancho, on the north the Great Lagoon, and on the south the rancho of Maximo Martinez. The grant contained 12,545 acres and was confirmed to Mary Louisa Greer and Manuela Coppinger in 1852.

Coppinger married Miss Mary Louisa Soto in 1837, and at his death, the widow and her daughter inherited the vast acres. Some time later she married Greer.

The account of the wedding as recorded in the history of Santa Clara county is as follows:

"At an early hour of that bright and beautiful day two equestrians, mounted on a single horse, might have been seen threading their way through the mazes of bushwood enroute to the Santa Clara Mission. These were a man and woman; he in the prime of life, she in the first blush of maidenhood. The sacred edifice attained, the two were joined in accordance with the holy Catholic faith; the ceremony ended, the faithful stead is once more mounted, and the newly made man and wife, alone with their happiness, their love, their hope and their fears, commenced the journey of life. Arriving at the homestead it is found that every preparation had been made for a wedding feast of more than ordinary grandeur; congratulations are showered in from every side; the guests bidden to fete give way to joy and gaiety unrestrained; to regale the inner man, a weighty beeve has been roasted among the birght embers which still smoulder at the bottom of the trench, viands are spread are prodigious profusion, the fiesta gives way to the dance, the dance to more feasting; day succeeds night and still the joyousness continues, until the third day is ended, when each returns to his home, carrying in his mind recollections which many years of the 'whips and scorn of time' will leave unimpaired."

Besides his widow and children the deceased is survived by a brother and sister, Lucas and Eliza Greer, residing at the old homestead in Palo Alto.

ANNUAL BALL OF FIRE DEPARMENT SUCCESSFUL EVENT

The dance of the Redwood City Fire department last Saturday evening was, as has always been the case with these affairs, a most successful event, both financially for the fire department, and for the enjoment of those present.

The arrangements for the dance were made by a committee consisting of Al Russell, J. P. Anderson, Clarence Choate, A. S. Ligouri, Bert Werder, E. M. Allen, P. E. Brand, L. M. Duncan, Wm. Lutje and Harry Potts.

The hall was artisically decorated for the occasion, and was filled to caapcity by dancers. Music was supplied by Weidner's orchestra of San Francisco.

"A number of Redwood City people are in Sacramento this week attending the state convention of Kiwanis clubs. Among those attending from here are John Gill, John Layng, Charles Lambert, Edward Harrison, E. B. Hinman and Clarence Doxsee. Others are expecting to leave today and tomorrow in order to take in a part of the convention. Tomorrow is the day set for the state speaking contest in which representatives of the different districts will speak on "Kiwanis; What It Is and Where Is It Going?" This district will be represented by Charles G. Lambert, who has been declared winner in the contests in his own club and in this district. If the local man can win the state contest he will compete in the international contest at the next international convention.

Legion Post Urges Stores to Close Armistice Day

Redwood City Post No. 105 American Legion is making an effort to have Armistice Day, November 11, observed here as elsewhere in the United States by closing the places of business and proper observance of the occasion. In order to further this plan Commader Thomas Vernall has issued the following appeal to the business places of the town:

"Redwood City Post No. 105, American Legion, asks all the merchants of Redwood City to close their places of business on Monday, November 12, in honor of the men who fell in the World War.

"Redwood City has always done its part in matters of vital interest to the ex-service men, so we take this oportunity to express our appreciation, and ask the merchants to co-operate again in this memorial occasion."

(Signed) THOMAS VERNALL,
Commander Post No. 105

An appeal from the State Commander of the Legion has been issued to the 35,000 members of the organization in this state to properly observe Armistice Day.

Commander Belgrano says: "Ten years have passed since we heard the glad news of the Armistice. Ten eventful years in which we have passed from the training camp, battlefield or windswept ocean where the fateful hour of 11 on November 11, 1918, found us, back to the normal affairs of life. Some of us have prospered, same failed; we have had many experiences in the every-day grind of existence, but with each and everyone of us who served then, there remains that heritage of memories that nothing can take from us. It binds all of us who served together by a common tie. And now, ten years after, we gather in city and hamlet to "remember." Call it a celebration if you will, and strive to forget, but it will still be a day of memory—memory of friendships made, memory of varied experience in camp and on shipboard, memory of hardships, and most sacred of all, memory of those who gave their all—of those who died. And from the memories comes our inspiration to pass down to the coming generation the fruits of our experience. On this Armistice Day it is our duty to inspire in the children of our land the tenets of true patriotism and good citizenship. Let us admonish them as to the horror of war, but not lose sight of the fact that adequate defense is the best preventive of war.

The American Legion is the leader in the observance of Armistice Day, and from reports I have received I know that the Departent of California is going to do its part in making this a real holiday in the true sense of the word."

COUNTY TEACHERS PLAN INSTITUTE

Miss Pansy Jewett Abbott, county superintendent of schools, announced this week plans for the annual institute of teachers which will be held this year at Burlingame. A morning and afternoon session will take place at the Burlingame high school on December 17.

The remaining two days of the institute will be in San Francisco in conjunction with the Bay Section California Teachers Association Attendance at the institute is mandatory upon all teachers of the county. The general public is invited.

Roadway Extension Denied by Supervisors

The petition of the Koff Realty Co. that a portion of Oak avenue, west of Redwood City, be widened and extended to meet the Alameda de las Pulgas was denied by the board of supervisors Monday.. The petition of K. A. Winters and others that this portion of the road be abandoned was granted.

The Koff interests were represented by Hall C. Ross of this city, who asked that the matter be laid over for two weeks. Those desiring the abandonment of the road declared that it had never been dedicated to public use. C. M. Doxsee and H. E. Higgins, both of the San Mateo County Title Co. spoke in favor of the proposed abandonment.

A portion of the avenue 719 feet long is affected by the order and will revert to the property owners through whose land it passes.

CHARTER LEAGUE TO SEEK ELECTION BY WRITE-IN CAMPAIGN

An effort to have their candidates elected in a write-in campaign will be made by the Redwood City Charter League. A meeting of the league held last Wednesday was told by Attorney A. J. Stebenne that this was the most likely course open to the candidates for the position of freeholder who are supported by the league. The ticket chosen by the league failed to file nomination papers in the time required to secure positions on the ballot.

Of the candidates selected by the league at its inception five are now off the list. Miss Irene Dickey, H. C. Tuchsen and Mrs. C. Chapman have declined to stand for election; Mark Ryan was out of town and his papers were not filed and George McNulty was nominated on the ticket filed later. The remaining members of the list which the league will strive to elect are W. G. Frost, C. M. Doxsee, M. H. Hughes, A. J. Stebenne, George Bell, Henry Witte, E. B. Ninman, Charles Hildebrandt, William P. Hogan, Pierce Coombs, Paul McCarthy, Mrs A. S. Kalenborn, Christian Uhlenberg and Louis Sericano.

The second list which was put up later, and which has been called the opposition ticket contains the names of Philip Brand, C. G. Lambert, Percy E. Long, Edward H. Sampson, Clarence E. Choate, Thomas Tuite, A. S. Liguori, Nellie L. Miramontes, Walter T. Kellogg and George W. McNulty.

Congressman Richard Welsh was in Redwood City yesterday in the interest of his project to have the federal government define a line along the bay shore from San Bruno to Ravenswood Point. He will bring the matter up at the next session of congress. The congressman was here to interest the supervisors and the chamber of commerce in the project, which means so much to the peninsula. A meeting will be held in the custom house on November 16 to discuss the question.

LEGIONNAIRES PLAN ARMISTICE DANCE FOR NOVEMBER 10

Members of the Redwood City Post American Legion are preparing for a dance on the eve of Armistice Day, November 11, at the Episcopal Parish House on Clinton street. Arrangements have been made to have music for the event by O'Conner's jazz orchestra. Some surprises are in store for those who attend, according to Charles Ward, one of the committee which is making plans for the event.

HOOVER STRONG IN COUNTY POLLS

San Mateo county as well as most parts of the country seems to favor a continuation of Republican control at the White House. At Tuesday's election this county put its unequivocal stamp of approval on Herbert Hoover as the successor to Calvin Coolidge next March. Hoover secured 16,274 votes in this county, while Governor Smith of New York was given 9,541, a majority of 6733, slightly less than two to one for the winning candidate.

About the same proportion held true in the race for a position in congress which was staged by A. M. Free, republican candidate and his opponent, Mrs. Cecelia C. Casserly, democratic standard bearer. Free was given 12,033 votes as against Mrs. Casserly's 7859.

The election brought out a record poll of votes for San Mateo county and election officials were busy until late hours in the morning, tabulating the results from the divers precincts. A poll of more than 26,000 votes was cast during the day, and great interest was evinced by the voters.

Total for Hoover.....2,124
Total for Smith.....1,438
Hoover has 1686 lead over Smith in Redwood City.

In Menlo Park, which prior to election was thought to be one of the strongest Smith strongholds of the county, Hoover was also victorious, but by a small margin, defeating his rival by only 5 votes, the vote being 398 for Hoover and 393 for Smith. Congressman A. M. Free was also victorious in this section securing 363 votes to 309 polled for Mrs. Cecelia Casserly, his opponent.

In the outside Menlo precincts, however, Smith secured a lead over Hoover. In the four outside Menlo recincts Hoover's vote was 309, while Smith secured 336. Free also carried this district with 263 votes to 254 for Mrs. Casserly.

Woodside proved a strong precinct for both republican candidates. Hoover was given 128 votes in this precinct to 79 for Smith, while Free defeated Mrs. Casserly by 126 to 57.

The presidential vote in the four Menlo and four outside precincts was as follows:

Menlo Park

Precinct	Hoover	Smith
1.	83	143
2.	99	86
3.	107	81
4.	109	83
	Outside
1.	95	53
2.	23	25
3.	89	121
4.	102	137

The strong holds of the republican majority in San Mateo county were in the cities along the bay section, where Hoover was given an overwhelming majority. On the coastside and in some portions of the northern part of the county small Smith majorities were returned. Colma gave Smith 334 votes to Hoover's 111, better than 3 to 1. In Daly City the vote for Smith was 1014 to Hoover's 925. Pescadero's majority was also for Smith. The New Yorker was given 92 votes in the two precincts of the coastside town, while Hoover was given 73. Halfmoon Bay's majority for the democrat was even larger. Here he secured 236 votes to his opponent's 102.

In the large cities of the county, however, majorities were obtained which completely overturned the results. In Burlingame Hoover's vote was 3808 as against 1,371 for Smith In San Mateo the vote stood 2825 to 1556 in favor of the republican candidate. Redwood City gave Hoover 2124 to his opponent's 1438, while in Atherton he was given 338 as against 173 for Smith.

In San Carlos Hoover was also a victor. The three precincts of that city gave him a vote of 303 to 175 for Smith. But in Belmont the democrat proved to be winner by a small margin. The vote stood 198 for Hoover and 221 for Smith. La Honda proved to be strongly republican, giving Hoover a vote of 46 and Smith 18. The best ratio, however, in favor of Hoover was set in East Palo Alto, where he received 176 votes to his opponents 47, a majority of almost 4 to 1. In North Palo Alto he was also victorious, securing 83 votes to Smith's 33, while Ravenswood in the same section of the county polled 169 votes for Hoover and 70 for Smith.

In Hilsborouh, Hoover secured 212 votes to Smith's 126. This is Mrs. Casserly's own town and here in her race for congress she only secured 157 votes to Free's 309.

In the congressional race, the incumbent was victor, having secured a maiority in the county of 4174. The enitre vote was Free 12,033 and Casserly 7,859. Mrs. Casserly was, however, high in 18 precincts in different parts of the county, while in another the vote was 60 for each candidate. Mrs. Casserly's strongest precinct was the 24th in San Mateo, where she obtained 102 votes to Free's 69. Her weakest spot appears to have been in the first precinct of San Bruno, where she obtained only 7 votes to Free's 103.

The vote cast at the Tuesday election is declared by deputies in the office of County Celrk Elizabeth M. Kneese to have been betwen 85 and 90 percent, an unusually heavy vote for any election.

Considerable interest was in evidence also this year in the outcome of certain of the amendments to the state constitution which appeared on the ballot. The results of the 21 amendments for this county was found to be as follows:

War Veterans Get Aid To Secure Meeting Place

Four hundred dollars were appropriated by the city council Monday evening for the purpose of moving the building formerly used as a manual training building on the property purchased by Hare, Brewer & Clark from the Redwood City School district. The building was offered by the realty firm to the American Legion, Spanish War Veterans and other patriotic organizations as a meeting place and club house provided the means could be found to move it away from its present location.

On Monday evening Thomas Vernall, commander of the Legion Post and E. B. Hinman, formerly commander of the United Spanish War Veterans here, appeared before the city council and asked that the board assist the veterans to secure this bufiding by having it moved onto the city park, known as Mezes Plaza on Marshall street. This was promised by the council on a motion made by Councilman Thorning, and $400 was voted to be used for this purpose. The building will set on a concrete foundation to be paid for by the veterans, and the deed will be given to the city. The organizations using the building will finance the upkeep and furnishings of the clubhouse.

The building has to be removed to make room for improvements to be made by Hare, Brewer and Clark, and that firm offered the building without cost to the organizations.

Moving operations were started yesterday and by tonight the house should be in its new location.

PLANE STOLEN FROM REDWOOD HANGAR

Police of the entire state were searching yesterday for an aeroplane stolen early yesterday morning from the hangar of the local airport. The theft was first known of by Mrs. Florence Saunders, manager of the field, who was awakened by the sound of a plane starting.

When Mrs. Saunders looked out of her house she saw the plane just leaving with three men in it. A car containing two other men, which had approached the fields over a plowed field from the rear speeded away just as the plane left. The plane is said to belong to Donald Templeman of San Francisco.

"Lucile is the Happiest Girl"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices, by using pure wholesome California Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California Figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties.

It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up, color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again. A Western mot[her], Mrs. H. J. Stoll, Valley P. O., Nebraska, says: "My little daughter, Roma Lucile, was constipated from babyhood. I became worried about her and decided to give her some California Fig Syrup. It stopped her constipation quick; and the way it improved her color and made her pick up made me realize how run-down she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in the West."

Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is imitated, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton.

Old "Drizzle" Runs

Washington. — Recent discoveries made in the famous Red Beds of Texas, of the Permian age, have proved that the markings described by earlier investigators as trails of many-legged worms, are in reality weather markings, or examples of "fossil weather."

The proof of this statement lies in a small slab of shale which shows numerous parallel markings, large and small, in such abundance that they could not have been made by animals. The designation of the markings as "drizzle runs" indicates the weather conditions in what is now Texas, in that far-off time.

Formed on Mud Flats.

The "chevron" formation of the markings is due to the accumulation of fine mud in a slow run-off on a mud flat, with a gentle slope. Some slight obstruction, such as a grain of sand or a bit of plant material or a hard piece of mud, was enough to start the formation of a slight ridge along which the markings continue.

On another slab of red shale are to be seen circular marks where a plant leaf or a piece of grass made circular scratches in the soft mud millions of years ago. One can almost see the sunshine following the shower after which an animal, unknown to science, walked past the wind-moved plant.

Disprove Raindrop Fossils.

Geologists have for many years regarded as fossil raindrops any group of circular or oval-shaped depressions, and the standard textbooks figure such markings. Recent experiments in the University of Wisconsin, supplemented by observations of shale slabs from the Texas Red Beds and on the soft mud and sand along the Pacific coast, prove clearly that many of the so-called raindrop impressions are due to air bubbles. Markings made in recent mud are exactly like those seen in the ancient red shales.

The influence of the proportions of sunshine and cloudiness, in ancient geological time, upon the rapidity of growth of individuals and upon the rapid expansion of groups of ancient animals and plants is now attracting the attention of students of fossil life. An attempt is being made to interpret, from conditions seen in ancient rocks, the state of the weather at a time when earth conditions were quite different from what they are now. It is expected that previously unrecognized bits of sunshine will very soon be seen in the rocks of the old Paleozoic.

George "Yats" Levison, for two years quarterback at Northwestern, this year has shown such remarkable ability as a ball carrier that Coach Hanley has shifted him to halfback. Day Coach Passengers Sleep at Their Own Risk

Sioux City, Iowa.—Train employees are not obligated to awaken passengers who fall asleep in day coaches when nearing destinations of such passengers and railroad companies are not liable for damages if loss results to the passengers if they are carried beyond their destinations, Judge A. O. Wakefield ruled here in the District court.

The ruling was made in the case of Clyde Vanderbick of Sioux City against the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific railroad. Vanderbick sued for $2,700.

Fog Horn Silenced to Please Resort Colony

Bexhill, England.—"Mournful Mary" has lost her job. She has been given a full month's notice, and the nerve-racked residents of the fashionable resorts within sound of her wails are jubilant.

The only friends "Mournful Mary" has are the members of the Imperial Merchant Service guild, which guards the interests of merchant seamen. They have submitted a protest against her dismissal with Trinity house.

What will fog-bound ships do, they ask indignantly, if Mary's piercing shriek fails to warn them that they are approaching the most dangerous turning in the English channel? For Mary is the foghorn of the Royal Sovereign lightship, and if she isn't popular with the residents at least the sailors appreciate her.

Gas Made Liquid

Berlin.—Oxygen used in highly compressed form in industrial undertakings can now be delivered in light brass containers instead of the heavy steel bottles formerly used and requiring two men to carry.

Dr. Paul Heylandt, Berlin chemist and inventor, has discovered a process by which the gas can be manufactured and delivered in liquid form. His invention has won for him the honorary degree of doctor of engineering from the Charlottenburg Institute of Technology here.

The oxygen gas is reduced to a liquid by Doctor Heylandt's process, is then poured into specially devised containers on automobile trucks and is carted from plant to plant much as gasoline or oil is delivered. The needs of the customers are supplied by merely opening a faucet and letting the desired quantity run into the small containers supplied to each customer.

At a nominal rental the customer is also supplied with apparatus for converting the liquid oxygen into compressed gas, which is then stored in the steel bottles that were hitherto transported back and forth.

Time to Squelch the Brood

UNDISCOVERED COUNTRIES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

To most of us the places we have not ourselves seen are virtually undiscovered countries. All that we know about them is what we have heard or read and what we have thus discovered is usually the worst. Now there is Africa. It looks to me like a huge reversed capital letter P on the map, and it connotes to me wild elephants, desert wastes, untraversed jungles teeming with strange animals and deadly serpents. It is a land of unclothed savages with rings in their noses and poisoned arrows in the quivers which they carry on their backs. My cousin Tracy has just come from Africa and his account of what he has seen there is quite different from the picture which I have painted of that, to me, undiscovered country. There are Ford cars in Africa, Tracy tells me, and radios and moving picture shows, and water softeners, and electric lights, and hard roads, and the girls bob their hair and carry lipsticks just as they do in other civilized countries. I have been quite mistaken in my judgment of Africa.

When Nancy and I were in Cambridge, Mass., 25 years ago or so, we got our meals with a group of dyed-in-the-wool New Englanders. One woman had been out West, she said—that is as far as Troy, N. Y., but none of them had ever looked across the Mississippi river, and they looked upon us as semi-civilized savages from a wild and unconquered West. They believed everything we told them about rattlesnakes, buffaloes, and Indian raids. They were astonished that we were able with as little dialect as we showed to communicate in the English language. The Mississippi valley to them was an undiscovered country. White, whom I later met, born in New England and imbued with a holy desire to do something to raise the moral and religious standards of the illiterate West, had a call to Austin, Texas, as assistant pastor of one of the southern churches. He was courageous but wary. He asked me confidentially, as of one who had had wider experiences in such things than himself, if I didn't think it would be a wise precaution for him to take pistols with him in going to so dangerous a locality.

I was in Herrin, Ill., a few weeks ago—Herrin in bloody Williamson county. It is a beautiful little city with a wide clean boulevard running through it 100 feet wide. It seems like a quiet well-ordered place. It is full of comfortable houses sitting in the midst of well-kept lawns and surrounded by beautiful gardens. It was in rose time that I was there, and I have never seen anywhere, not even in England nor in Italy, more beautiful roses than there were in Herrin. They have beautiful school buildings. I do not know another city of 10,000 population which has a better designed and more attractive high school building than Herrin. The people seem to love beauty and to stand for education. Maybe we have not discovered Herrin!

Heat and Storms

The reason we always feel warm just before a storm is because there is so much moisture in the air that it cannot absorb the perspiration of the body. This process of evaporation of the water from our skins is the chief means by which our bodies are kept cool.

Great Volcano Stirs

Naples.—Vesuvius is fretful. She is flashing red by night and by day pouring into the blue sky a column of sulphurous smoke which floats off in a breeze for mile upon mile, or in calm air rises straight toward the vault of the sky for many hundreds of feet.

Vesuvius in normal mood shows only a wisp of smoke and does not make the night over her red with sudden flashes of fire nor does she rumble so. A few weeks ago she was, to all appearances, sound asleep. She takes long sleeps: she has been known to sleep for 500 years. So long did she sleep after her destruction of Pompeii and Herculaneum that it became almost a legend and was forgotten by the peasants dwelling about her. Goats grazed in the crater upon the rich green grass that grew along the shores of two lakes deep within that mighty hole.

Then suddenly she gave warning, which few heeded, and poured seven rivers of fire down into the surrounding villages, destroying them and killing hundreds. One of these rivers rushed pell-mell into the Bay of Naples, where the water boiled for days. This was the great eruption of 1631. The peasants dwelling in Torre del Greco and in Massa di Somma and other small settlements that were wiped out took it that demons lived somewhere under the mountain.

Now Vesuvius is again in eruption; not a tremendous one such as the recorded eruptions of the past, but one at least showing she still has vitality. She has not driven the population away from her base, but her grand pyrotechnical display has again become a lively attraction for visitors.

New York.—One hundred pounds British gold for one fish was the top price paid at the recent British Aquarists' association exhibition in London. The fish was a blue, telescopic-eyed veiltail, one of the new forms of goldfish bred by the Japanese. Gold, white and black in these forms are common, but blue is a rarer color.

Ultra-Violet Rays Soon Fade Paintings

Saranac Inn, N. Y.—Exposed paintings, and especially those which are conserved as a national treasure, should never be lighted more than is necessary, and, preferably, they should be lighted through an artificial illumination so corrrected as to approach daylight in quality.

This is the suggestion of J. A. MacIntyre and H. Buckley of his majesty's office of works and national physical laboratory of England, who have made an extensive study of picture fading. Their findings were presented in a paper, "Protection of Pictures and Museum Pieces from Fading," which was presented at the session of the International Illumination congress here.

Ultra-violet rays are in general the dominant cause of fading, the scientists set forth, and the elimination of these rays was urged. Because the modern paint manufacturer does not require his pigment to last more than a few years at the most, the subject of fading is most important, it was pointed out, if any of the present-day masterpieces are to be preserved for posterity.

Our President Elect

THE American people have spoken. On Tuesday they elected Herbert Hoover president of the United States by a landslide vote. The campaign was marked by bitterness. Acrimony was injected into the contest that should have had no place in it. However, the voter has registered his choice and all must bow to the will of the majority.

Let all animosities and feeling engendered in the heat of the campaign be forgotten and all get behind Mr. Hoover for a successful administration and greater prosperity for the country.

Mr. Hoover is a Californian and should have the wholehearted support of the state.

We predict a successful administration for Mr. Hoover. The country has confidence in him. He will not betray that confidence, but will give the commonwealth an economical, wise and able administration of the affairs of the country at Washington.

Real Life Values

THE desire of so many to attract attention, to appear prosperous, to sail under false colors, causes them to impose upon themselves the chains of slavery. Monthly payments on the installment, the living above one's means are jealous masters that demand days of drudgery, hours of worry, causing new wrinkles, gray hairs, and shortened lives. The momentary satisfaction that may be derived from putting on a show is small compensation.

The old car suits fine until the neighbor gets a new model with a differently shaped hood. The clothes would do well for another season, but what would people say? The furniture looks great until the wonderful bargain sale is heard of. Everything can be bought for just a little down and a little a month. Not so bad to hear about, but how fast those months come around! How quickly the bank account may be depleted by numerous small checks!

When one pauses to think and observe it is obvious that it is not necessary to cover the real thing with gaudy labels in order for its true worth to be known. Those who are in fact prosperous and successful care little for the appearance of wealth that others sacrifice so much to maintain. If one investigates further, it is found also that these were not procrastinators in the matter of the nest egg. Nor were they adverse to doing without the showy red paint.

Yet man's inherent enemies, jealousy, envy, false pride, the much talked of inferiority complex urge one deeper and deeper into a sea of bills until it becomes a constant struggle to keep the head above water. The little nest egg that was going to be put away to get a start never materializes. The laying of the foundation for the savings account is put off until tomorrow and too often that tomorrow never arrives.

The ability to be independent, the joy of freedom from debt, the knowledge that you can look everyone in the eye, knowing you are square with the world and getting a start towards success, is traded for a mess of pottage. One spends on and dreams of castles in the future.

It is certain that if the dream castle is to become a reality, one has to start gathering the stones. It is true that they are a little heavy at first but with each one placed the burden is less and there is a lot of satisfaction in seeing the stones placed in the wall. Then too, the waster, the spender, must also work in the quarry. The burdens are just as heavy, the hours of labor as long, the distinction being that such a one never knows the satisfaction of attainment and possession. The work is done for others and the castle remains a dream.

Gland Functions Interesting Study

By C. F. Davidson, M. D.
Seattle, Washington

The term "glands" is widely used in referring to two kinds of tissue. One is composed of secreting cells, which make products useful in the economy of the body. The other is composed of lymphoid cells and has to do with circulation of the lymph.

Lymph is a portion of the blood that escapes from the blood vessels to bathe the cells, of which the body is composed, carrying to them food and oxygen and carrying away waste products. The channels through which lymph is collected and passed back into the blood stream form the lymphatics. The lymph glands or nodes occur throughout this system. They may be compared to police station. It is their function to stop poison from getting into the body. That is why they enlarge with infection. If their work is successful, after infection they subside and return to normal size. If less successful, they may break down and discharge pus. Breaking down and discharging pus means that a part of the gland has been overcome and killed. The discharging pus is nature's way of ridding the body of the killed tissue.

Secreting glands are divided in to two groups, ordinary glands and ductless glands. Ordnary glands have channels or ducts that collect and discharge the secretion away from the cells. These lands were discovered early and their functions were easly determined by collecting and studying their secreton. These glands are not commonly involved in disease, except the arotid or salivary glands which are involved in the infecton known as mumps.

The history of the so-called ductless glands is quite different. They were discovered much later and their functons have been much more difficult to study because their secretion is not collected and carried away through ducts. It can be obtained only from the gland tissue. This has been a difficult task, and for some of the glands or portions of them, it still remains an unsolved task. It is only within the memory of our generation that the first of these products was isolated. It is within the last ten years that the parathyroids, Islands of Langerhans, anterior portion of the pituitary and the ovaries have yielded up an active principle that can be used in medical practice.

It is in this feature that the ductless glands are quite different from the other secreting glands. Other secreting glands as a rule furnish a product that serves its function on material or in a manner somewhat separate and apart from the body. The milk, for instance, from the mammary glands, serves to nourish the young; the secretions from glands associated with the intestinal tract particularly serve digestive purposes. the secretion from the lachrymal gland keeps the eyes moist.

The secretion from ductless glands, on the other hand, works on the body itself. The product from the thyroid determines the rate at which we burn the food we take; the product from the Islands of Langerhans makes possible the utilization of starch and sugar; the product from a portion of the pituitary has to do with the regulation of growth; the product from the parathrods has to do with the control of lime in the system.

In other words the ductless glands form a system of glands. whose functon it is automatically to control these vital proceses. Disturbance in function of any one leads to a disturbance in well being, usually a disturbance not involved in disease or in abnormal conditions, these glands are greatly involved.

Goiter is a disturbance in the thyroid; too much function produces nervousness and other signs and symptoms; too little function is evidenced in impaired nutrition and growth; absence of function results in an idiotic dwarf. Failure of function in the Islands of Lanerhans results in diabetes.

Space will not permit even a naming of disturbances incident to disturbed functions in other ductless glands, but their study bas opened up a field in physiology most intricate, and full of possibilities for furthering our knowledge.

Further Lines Linked With U. S. By Phone

Transatlantic telephone service was inaugurated on Saturday, November 3, between Vienna, the capital of Austria, and the United States, according to the announcement made by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. On the same date the city of Pueblo, Mexico, was included in transatlantic service.

Vienna is the eleventh largest city in the world Through the extension of transatlantic service to this city, 110,000 telehpones and nearly two million people were added to those in Europe, United States and Mexico now interconnected by telephone.

Thus in two years, extensions of transatlantic telephone service have made possible the interconnection by telephone of eight of the twelve largest cities in the world. Austria is the eleventh European nation to be reached by telephone from North American points.

The calls for Vienna will cross the Atlantic via the radio link to London and thence proceed under the English channel by submarine cable and across Europe by land cables through Brussels, Cologne, Frankfurt and Nuremberg.

Robins In Large Flocks

Robins in large flocks are coming down from the north to this locality to feed on the toyon berries. The birds are here earlier than usual. This may be construed as an indication that there will be a wet winter. Last season but few robins came here, this puzzled the old timers. The robin is a song bird and is protected by the federal government and may not be shot by the hunter.

Spent Her Girlhood Here

Miss Jennie Flood, who passed away in San Francisco last week, spent her girlhood in Menlo Park on the estate of her father, the late James C. Flood, the bonanza king. At the time of her father's death she was bequeathed the estate here and the Bear Gulch Water Company's holding. She deeded them to the University of California, but later the estate was returned to her brother, the late James L. Flood. The University still has the water plant. Miss Flood was charitable, beneficent and kind and good to those less fortunate than herself. Many will remember her benefactions and kindness. Long will she live in the memory of those she has helped. She leaves a large estate, much of it will go to charitable institutions.

Death of Father Meyer

Father Charles F. Meyer, for many years connected with St. Patrick's Seminary here, passed away in San Francisco last Saturday. The deceased was an instructor at the seminary and years ago was temporary pastor of the Church of the Nativity. He was 78 years old. During his younger years he was a noted musician. Father Meyer was a truly holy man, and devout with an unceasing desire for work in his sacred calling. He has gone to his heavenly reward which he earned by a life of sacrifice and holiness.

Injured in Auto Accident

William A. Carnduff, the well-known sportman and capitalist of Ravenswood, was injured in a railroad accident at the Oak Grove crossing here Thursday evening. He had just taken his car from a garage and as he approached an incoming train, the brakes of the machine refused to function, the car smashing into the engine. The automobile was wrecked, Carnduff was thrown out, and suffered a fracture of his right leg. He was removed to the Palo Alto hospital. Mr. Carnduff has recovered from the shock and in the course of ten days will return to his estate at the Dumbarton vehicular bridge on the Willow road.

Killed at Corte Madera

Charles Johnson, the sixteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs Alfred B. Johnson, was killed last Sunday at Corte Madera by the accidental discharge of his shot gun while entering his boat in pursuit of ducks on the bay. His father is well known here where he was born and grew to manhood. He is a brother of F. W. Johnson, the widely-known resident of this place. Charles was a young man of promises and ability. He was making a good record in high school and would have made a name for himself had he lived. His mother was the former Miss Stingel of Mayfield. The Johnsons have resided in San Francisco for some years.

Election Passes Quietly

The election on Tuesday passed off quietly, the voters coming early to the polls, registering their choire for the presidency and then going about their business. Menlo Park gave its vote to Hoover, he carrying the city by a slight majority. Of the four precincts, Hoover carried three and Smith one. The vote of the precincts was as follows:

Precinct No. 1 — Hoover 83, Smith 143;

Precinct No. 2 — Hoover 99, Smith 86;

Precinct No. 3 — Hoover 107, Smith 81;

Precinct No. 4 — Hoover 109, Smith 83; Total Hoover 398; Smith 393. Both men and women of the local clubs worked hard, and to the members goes the credit of carrying the city for Hoover.

By her will and codicil, Miss Flood devised all of her estate to her niece, Mary Emma Flood, and her nephew, James Flood, except personal effects given to her niece and legacies to employees aggregating $12,000, to wit: Bryan Higgins, $5,000; Rose Agnes Bohan, $5,000; Anthony Chiapellone, $2,000.

The petition for probate puts the value of the estate between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000.

Thus far this year, 120,734 chauffeurs have been registered a gain of 21,000 over the same period of last year.

Cooling Plant Planned for S. F.

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 8—(CNB)—A pre-cooling system and cold storage plant on the San Francisco Water front owned by the State of California which will enable him to hold his produce pending shipments and extend the shipping season from the present four to eight months will be built in time for the 1929 harvest, G. H. Hecke, state director of Agriculture, announced today.

These refrigeration facilities for perishable products would enable the farmer to indefinitely extend his shipping season and market successful many fresh fruits and vegetables which it is now too expensive to rush to distant consumers.

Dr. and Mrs. F. S. Gregory returned this week from a motor trip of several weeks through the north west which took them as far as British Columbia.

Committee For Peninsula Study Appointed by Fay

Authorized by a meeting of citizens of San Francisco and San Mateo counties to appoint a committee of ten to take charge of the Peninsula Survey recently completed,, and to outline a plan of organization and procedure, Philip J. Fay, president of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, announced yesterday his choice of ten representative citizens from the interested communities. In order that the communities might be equally representative of the Peninsula communities and of San Francisco, Fay's appointments are divided equally. They are:

E. B. Hinman, President Redwood City Chamber of Commerce

M. J. Bettencourt, President Coastside Civic Union of San Mateo county, Halfmoon Bay.

President of the San Mateo Chamber of Commerce to be ? ? -

From San Francisco:

Colbert Coldwell, Jesse Steinhart, J. W. Mailliard, Jr., Isadore Zellerbach, James Mullen,

The appointment of presidents of Chambers Commerce in the Peninsula cities, Fay said, was decided upon because they are the best informed in their respective communities concerning the fitness and ability of those whom they will in turn appoint when the committee is enlarged.

In his letter of notification to the committee members, Fay explained that the committee is to have the power to extend itself by the appointment of additional members as it may, in its wisdom, deem proper, and make the entire committee as broad and representative as possible of all communities in the respective counties.

Fay further stressed the fact that in the hands of this committee rests the success of the most important and progressive undertaking ever considered by these communities.

An early meeting of the newly appointed committee will be called to give further consideration to the entire matter.

Officer Stanley Wood Apointed Sargeant

By action of the city council Monday evening the office of police sargeant was created for Redwood City, and the first police officer to hold that office was appointed. Officer Stanley D. Wood was appointed as sargeant on the recommendation of Z. T. Thorning, police commissioner, and the approval of Chief of Police C. L. Collins. Thorning also moved that the police department be supplied with a new car. This motion was carried.

A masquerade ball will be given by the Redwood City Improvement Association on Saturday evening, December 8th, in the Woman's Club house on Clinton street. Miss Viola Maysenhalder is chairman of the committee which is making arrangements for the event.

COMMISSION GRANTS PETION OF W. P. LINES

The Interstate Commerce Commission has granted the application of the Sacramento Northern Railway, which is controlled thru stock ownership by the Westren Pacific Railroad Company, to acquire the properties of the San Francisco - Sacramento Railroad, commonly known as the Sacramento Short Line. It is expected that all proceedings pre-requisite to the taking over of the physical properties of the San Francisco Sacramento Railroad by the Sacramento Northern will be disposed of so that this may be done on January 1, 1929.

The San Francisco - Sacramento Railroad operates an electric line between Oakland and Sacramento, a distance of 87 miles, and it also operates a branch line from West Pittsburg to Pittsburg, making a total mileage of 89.1. The San Francisco - Sacramento Railroad enters San Francisco by ferry through its connection with the Key System Transit Company at 40th and Shafter streets, Oakland. The Sacramento Northern operates an electric line between Sacramento and Chico, with branch lines to Woodland, Swanston, Colusa and Oroville, and a detached branch, known as the Vaca Valley line, from Vacaville to Suisun, Fairfield and Willotta. With the acquisition of the San Francisco-Sacramento railroad, the Sacramento Northern will have a total mileage of 306.

"One of the chief purposes of the purchase of the San Francisco-Sacramento Railroad," said President George F. Detrick, of the Sacramento Northern Railway, "is to establish under one management and control a through line of railroad, electrically operated, between San Francisco and Oakland, via Sacramento, and Chico, thereby promoting economy and improvement in service. Under the new arrangement it will be possible to effect betterments on the San Francisco-Sacramento Railroad for which means have been lacking in the past. The acquisition of the San Francisco-Sacramento Railroad will also make the Sacramento Northern a greater factor in transportation in the territory served than before.

"The aim will be to give an improved service between San Francisco Bay and Sacramento, Chico and other points served by the greater Sacramento Northern.

"The Sacramento Northern is now constructing a branch line 16 miles in length from Riverview, a point on the San Francisco-Sacramento delta region. It also has an application pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission for a permit to construct a 7½ mile extension of its Holland branch to Ryde, and an application for a permit to construct a 7½ mile connection between its Vaca Valley line and the San Francisco - Sacramento Railroad has been heard by the Interstate Commerce Commission and decision is pending. The San Francisco-Sacramento Railroad will extend its Pittsburgh branch into the industrial district tributary to that city, provided its application for the necessary certificate of public convenience and necessity, for which application has been made to the Interstate Commerce Commission, is granted."

The acquisition of the San Francisco-Sacramento Railroad by the Sacramento Northern and the betterments in service to the public that will result therefrom constitute one of the objectives in the plans which The Western Pacific Railroad Company and its subsidiary lines have under way for extending and improving railroad transportation facilities in central California.

Better Roads Seen for County

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 8—(CNB)—More and better roads for San Mateo county are predicted today, upon the announcement of the State Board of Equalization that predicated upon the increased gasoline sales during the first nine months of 1928 the total net gas tax for road purposes for the year will exceed $30,000,000, according to its estimate.

The gas tax for July, August and September totalled $8,551,-276,39, bringing the amount for the first three-quarters up to $24,-486,404.93, representing an average gain of 8.49 per cent over the same periods for 1927.

The state's share of $20,000,000 will be used for maintenance and reconstruction of state highway and park roads, while the counties must expend the money through roads improvement funds.

The Redwood City Promotion Association requests all members to be present at the next meeting which is to be held Tuesday evening, November 13, at the grammar school on Broadway. Final arrangements will be made for the turkey whist party which is to be held on Friday evening, November 16 at the Foresters hall on Phelps street.

Governor Young In Proclamation For Celebration

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 8—(CNB)—Governor C. C. Young appealed to all Californians today to celebrate the coming of Armistice Day with appropriate ceremonies in a proclamaton announcing.

"November 11th this year, will be the tenth anniversary of the Armistice Day which marked the cessation of the most destructive and far reachng war in the history of the human race. Inasmuch as November 11th falls on Sunday, all ceremonies and celebrations will be held the day following.

"It is fitting that the anniversary of this day should be commemorated with prayer and thanksgiving and by exercises designed to promote the spirit of peace."

The two minutes of silence beginning at 11 a. m., the inclusion of school children in ceremonies and the flying of flags are all recommended as fitting ways to honor the day, "as an exression of gratitude that peace exists, and confirmation of our sincere desire that war be outlawed forever."

Lower Taxes Seen In Finance Plan

(By Lawrence Monfort

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 8—(CNB)—San Mateo County may prepare now for its share of a $15,000,000 annual "donation" from present state revenues toward meeting local costs of government two years hence.

If the legislature meeting in January thinks favorably of the California Tax Commission's tentatively prepared proposal, voters in 1931 will be asked to empower by constitutional amendment switch from state to local revenue channels of that approximate amount accruing yearly from present taxes levied on public utilities realty holdings.

Under the plan, which would give county governments a voice in expenditure of utilities taxes for the first time since adoption of Amendment No. 1 in 1910, San Mateo county would receive the entire tax revenue from all public utilities within its boundaries, but collections would be made by the state following adjustment by the Equalization Board which would take tax rates and assessed values of all counties into consideration in making a general broad average.

The utilities still would pay into state coffers such taxes as would be due from them on net income under Proposal No. 3 on the ballot next Tuesday, but their real or physical holdings would be assessed entirely for local government purposes, and would be subject to apportionment for road, school and other county expenses just as moneys now accruing to the county general fund are applied.

The result will be, if the legislature submits this proposed constitutional amendment and it is adopted, a considerable lowering as well as equalizing of the local tax burden now born by property owners, in the opinion of State Controller Ray L. Riley, member of the tax commission and of the equalization board.

Railroads, for instance, will pay to the various county governments taxes on that portion of their real holdings lying within county boundaries. If the utilites lie entirely within county limits, that county will be the sole beneficiary of taxes levied against them.

While the Tax Commission has not yet framed its proposal for return of public utilities real estate to counties for taxation purposes, its membership is understood to be agreed upon the principal of the plan which will be submitted formally when its general report to the legislature is rendered early in January.

Stabalized Crops Bring Farm Wealth

(By ESTO BROUGHTON)

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 8—(CNB)—Harvest time is not only yielding a veritable horn of plenty in more bountiful crops this year, but also promises to yield to the farmer a greater golden harvest of shekels through well sustained prices, G. H. Hecke, state director of Agriculture, announced to the Fruit Growers at their annual convention at Riverside, it was reported today.

California has been turned into a new Dixie land with the cotton crop almost doubled. Hecke estimated the 1928 yield at 147,000 bales in comparison with only 91,000 bales for 1927. Under the prevailing prices, this cotton and cotton seed will return to the farmers at least $15,950,000, or a gain of over five million more than last season.

Wheat farmers share the general good fortune with the smaller acreage planted last spring returning a larger crop than the heavier acreage of the previous year.

Farmers will control the state pocket book according to Hecke, with an annual income for this season approximating $700,000,000. Increased production and fair prices are credited by the farm chief with this prospective gain over the 1927 production of $648,840,000 value of farm products, which was a distinct gain over the 1926 crop of $667,982,000.

Fully one-third of the state's market basket is filled by the live stock products, including meat, dairy products, wool, mohair, these totalling $210,000,000 in the past year.

Unusually high prices for any particular product is always followed by an overproduction and consequently low prices for it, Hecke warned the growers. The staplizing of production and marketing conditions was advised by the agricultural director as a means of making farmers' financial life ore certain and prosper-

Mayor Asks Support For Red Cross

Urging all citizens to renew their allegiance to the American Red Cross, Mayor Beeger yesterday issued a proclamation naming the period from Armistice Day, November 11, through Thanksgiving Day, November 29, as the dates for the organization of the Twelfth Annual Roll Call, in which the local chapter is expected to enroll fifteen hundred members for 1929.

Calling attention to the fact that only through memberships solicited once a year, are the many activities of the organization supported, he declared it to be "one of the utmost importance that response here and throughout the nation shall be on a scale commensurate with that oranizattion's needs." Not less than five million members are needed this year.

The Mayor's proclamation said in part:

"Once a year the American Red Cross extends to us the privilege of membership in order that we may have a share in its great work. At home and abroad this organization acts for the American people, translating into countless deeds of service the humanitarian impulses of a great nation.

"When great calamaties, such as the Mississippi Valley flood and the West Indies hurricane confront us it is the Red Cross to which we instinctively turn. Relatively few of know that literally every day during the last year its workers were ministering to the needs of sufferers from lesser disasters in this country as the result of tornadoes, fires, explosions, floods, hurricanes and other calamities.

"Disaster relief is but one of its activities and only one of many reasons why we should lend our support. In other fields, equally as important even if not so spectacular, it is waging a silent campaign to raise the health standards of the nation.

"It is of the utmost importance that response here and throughout the nation shall be on a scale commensurate with that organization's needs. I urge therefore that every citizen at this time renew his allegiance to the 'Greatest Mother.' "

The RED LAMP

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

THE STORY

Events of the story as set forth in the journal of William A. Porter, professor of English literature:

The professor's uncle, Horace Porter, died mysteriously at his home, Twin Hollows, now the professor's property. Jane, the professor's wife, is a psychic. With their niece, Edith, the Porters go to Twin Hollows for their vacation, despite Jane's reluctance. A letter Horace had been writing at the time of his death shows that he was interested in spiritualism. It hints of danger. A "red lamp" is mentioned. They take up their residence in the lodge, because of Jane's aversion to the house. Warren Halliday, in love with Edith, comes to live in the boathouse. A number of sheep are mysteriously killed in the vicinity. The slayer leaves a cabalistic sign at the scene of the killings. Greenough, a detective, arrives and Porter has a feeling that he is under suspicion. Twin Hollows is rented to an elderly, partially paralyzed man, Bethel, who, with his secretary, Gordon, takes possession. A youth, Carroway, on watch for the sheep killer, disappears. Porter has the red lamp hidden in a room of which he alone has the key, but many people, including the professor himself, believe they have seen its reflection at Twin Hollows. Halliday is mysteriously attacked and seriously injured. Carroway is found in the bay, murdered.

There is, I understand, no definite engagement between them.

I must not forget to enter that Halliday last night believes he saw the red lamp burning, in the den behind the library of the main house. He told me the details this morning as he waited for Edith to don my overalls.

It was his first night, after his accident, at the boathouse, and he could not sleep.

"I had a good bit of pain," he said, "and at one o'clock I got up and went outside. There was a sort of dull red light coming from the windows of the library of the other house, and I watched it for awhile. It was extremely faint, and at first I thought it might be a fire; then, as it didn't grow any, I saw it must be a light of some sort."

He knew the stories of the red lamp, but he also knew I had locked it away, so after a time he started up toward the house. He was about half way up the lawn when it went out, suddenly, and left him staring.

But he was curious, and he went on. He made a complete circuit of the building, but there was no movement or sound from within, and so he turned and went back again. He believes the light was in the den, not the library, for he saw only a diffused reddish glare, as though it came from behind. He could not, through any of the three long French windows which open onto the terrace, see the source of that glare.

Here, then, is corroboration of my own impression of some few nights ago, but with a difference. For I saw the light itself, a momentary flash as though a breeze had for an instant pushed open the heavy curtains at the den windows, and then had let them fall again.

I am convinced that young Gordon has never seen the light, or he would have spoken of it. He is fluent enough about what he calls the "spooky" quality of the house. It is unlikely that Mr. Bethel, imprisoned in his upper room, can have any knowledge of it. Yet here we have two dispassionate observers, seeing at different times and under different circumstances, a light apparently of spontaneous origin and no known cause.

July 19.

A sudden and terrifying storm outside. Above the howling of the wind I can hear the surf beating against the shore. Halliday reports, over the telephone, that the float is in danger and that the runway has broken loose. But there is nothing to do. I have just been out, and I do not propose to be soaked again.

(Note: The approach of the storm had made Jane very nervous, and I had driven in to Doctor Hayward's for a sleeping medicine for her.)

Jock is as bad as Jane, and should have a narcotic also! He is moving uneasily from place to place, now and then emitting a dismal howl, and Clara is sitting forlornly at the foot of the staircase, under the impression that it is the only place free from metal in the house, and thus less likely to attract the lightning.

It is indeed a night for dark deeds And for dark thoughts. . . .

I wonder if I have any justification for my suspicions? Why should Hayward, preparing to go out to an obstetric case, start me along a new and probably unjustified line of thought? Surely, of all men in the world, he has the best right to carry ether. I must be careful not to do as Greenough has done, allow my necessity for finding the guilty man to run away with my judgment.

And yet, in spite of myself, I cannot help feeling that Hayward fulfills many of the requirements. He alone, of all the people hereabout, is free to move about the country at night without suspicion. He knew Uncle Horace "as well as anybody." He is—and God forgive me if I am wrong—enough of a sailor to know and use the half-hitch.

There are other points, also. He is about my age, if anything older, but he is a muscular man. And he is, like all general practitioners in the country, by way of being a surgeon also. He would know how to find the jugular vein of a sheep. . . .

"In all earnestness I appeal to you to consider the enormity of the lead," wrote poor old Horace, more than a year ago. But while killing sheep is unpleasant, even sad, there is no particular enormity in it. I pass by a leg of spring-time lamb without considering that a tragedy lies behind it. The murder of Carroway, too, cannot come under the strictures of that letter; it was done as a matter of protection.

Nearest of all to the possibilities suggested by the letter comes the attack on Halliday, and if the sheep-killer did that, why not have put his devilish symbol on the car during that silent ride of a mile before he prepared to strike?

Why have crept in later and done it?

But here again—the doctor had access to the car, after Greenough had examined it. He went in alone, according to Clara, and was there some time.

Was it, then, the doctor's typewriter which wrote the cipher over which Halliday has been puzzling? The GeLTr, K. 23?

July 20.

Maggie Morrison disappeared last night; disappeared as completely as though she had been wiped from the face of the earth by the storm.

Livingstone telephoned me the facts at seven this morning, and Halliday and I took the car and went over. We have been out with the searching party all day, but without result.

Tonight the search is still going on. Starr has sworn in more deputies, and the entire countryside is aroused.

Jane has been ill all day, and has kept her bed.

July 21.

No trace of the unfortunate girl tonight, and all hope of finding her alive is slowly being abandoned. . . .

I can now record such facts as we know, relative to the mystery.

The girl went in to Oakville yesterday to do some shopping, and remained for dinner with Thomas and his wife. In spite of Thomas' prophecy of a storm she insisted on staying over for a moving picture, and it was therefore ten-thirty when, alone in the farm truck, she started out of town.

Nothing more is known of her movements, save that she got as far as the Hilburn road, about two hundred yards beyond the Livingstones' gate. The truck was found there yesterday morning at daylight by an early laborer on the Morrison farm, who, however, thought that she had abandoned it there during the storm the night before, and neglected to report it.

At the farm house itself there was no uneasiness, as the family supposed the girl remained in town. But when the hour came for her to start with her milk delivery, and she had not arrived, inquiries were set on foot.

The truck shows no signs of any struggle, and that robbery was not the motive of whatever has happened is shown by the fact that the missing girl's pocketbook was found behind the seat of the truck, where she usually placed it.

Greenough and the sheriff were on the ground when we got there, as well as a small knot of country folk, kept at a distance by a deputy or two, and already a small posse, hastily recruited, was beating the wood nearby. Such clews as there may have been, however, had been obliterated by the storm. There is no trace of the dreaded symbol in chalk. . . .

Halliday has reconstructed the story, in view of his own experience.

"The fellow was waiting," he said, "and hailed her, as he hailed me. He knew nobody would pass a man caught out in a storm like that. He got in, and closed the storm curtains, and of course she hadn't a chance in the world."

Possibly five hundred men and boys have been searching steadily since yesterday morning; the back country where it happened, is fairly open; the sea, with its salt marshes, both of which would give unlimited opportunity for concealment, is fully six miles by road from where the truck was found. . . .

Much talk is going around as to a story from the lighthouse on the extreme tip of Robinson's point today. As is to be expected, the superstitious are making considerable capital of it. And I myself am not disposed to dismiss it without considerable thought.

The story is as follows:

On the night of the tragedy, a flying night bird of some sort broke one of those windows of the lighthouse which protect the light itself. The keeper and the second keeper repaired it as best they could, but the terrific gusts of the wind made them uneasy, and they remained on watch.

They sat, high in the air, in the room just beneath the light, now and then glancing up to see that all was well. The storm increased in violence, and as the sea came up the surf beat on the rocks below with a crashing only equaled by the thunder itself. As is usual in the high tide of the full moon, the low portion of the point to landward, and the keeper's houses, the engine shed, boathouse and oil storage tank were soon cut off from the mainland by a strip of angry ocean.

Nevertheless, they were comfortable enough, and the under-keeper had actually fallen asleep, at eleven o'clock, when there came a sudden lull in the storm. It was that time which I well remember, when there came one of those ominous and quivering pauses in the attack which seem, not a promise of peace, but a gathering together of all the powers of wind, sea and sky for one final and tremendous effort.

And in that pause Ward, the light-keeper, heard something below in the tower. He touched his assistant on the shoulder and he sat up. Both of them then distinctly heard footsteps on the lowest flight of stairs, five floors below.

They were alone in the tower; cut off from the mainland by a rushing strip of tide, and no boat could have landed through the surf. And outside was that unearthly quiet which was more sinister than the storm itself. Neither one of them moved or spoke, but the keeper remembers that, as the steps came on inexorably, a cold air began to eddy around the small circular room, and that he looked up at the red light apprehensively.

At the top of the second flight the steps paused, and both keepers drew a breath. Then they heard a small dry cough, and the steps recommenced on the third level.

Up and up. The stairs curved round the inside wall of the tower, and they knew they would not see what was climbing until it was fairly on them. They sat there, their eyes glued to the door, and heard the steps coming up the last round. Whatever it was, it was on them. It reached the top, and the next step would bring it into view.

Then the storm burst again, in an explosion that fairly set the tower rocking, and simultaneously the electric lights in the room went out.

It was then that the assistant keeper swears that something touched him; something cold; but there seems to be no doubt, whether that is true or not, that the whole room was filled with the cold eddying wind referred to before.

I prefer to trust the head-keeper's statement. Ward is an unemotional type, and this is what he says:

"I was scared enough, but when the lights went out I looked up at the lamp. It's an oil burner, and it was all right. Old Faithful, we call it. Well, you have to understand that we weren't entirely in the dark, even then; some of the red light from above came down, and I could see where Jim was standing. I couldn't see him, y'understand, but I could see where he was. And there was a third party in the room, over near the stair-door. That is, he was there one minute; the next he was gone."

Keeping close together the two men went down through the successive floors of the tower. They found nothing, and the outer door was still closed and bolted.

In view of so detailed and corroborative a statement, the final support of my early skepticism has had a severe blow. . . .

What would be the change, should we enter another world, with the same faculties we have now, but no limitations in their use? To sorrow, to love, even perhaps to hate. And who shall laugh at the poor ghost who, knowing and suffering all things, makes its desperate attempt to avert a wickedness? To convey, through the thick mantle of the flesh, a knowledge that is not conveyance. To stand by, wringing its pale amorphous hands, while crimes go on and unnecessary wretchedness inhabits the earth?

Nothing bodily accounts for personality. Back of everything physical, and greater than anything physical, is the mind. And mind is not an attribute of matter.

July 22.

The body has not been found, and the sheriff has raised the reward to five thousand dollars. This with Livingstone's original five hundred for the sheep-killer, which is to go to the finder of the murderer as being in all probability the same individual, raises the reward to fifty-five hundred dollars.

Today, however, certain information acquired by Halliday has shifted the scene of the search to the salt marshes and the bay, and tonight, as I glance from my window I can see lanterns moving in the marsh beyond the main house, and up and down the shore. Jane has made coffee, and those of the searchers who come up this way from the beach have been stopping in.

Halliday's discovery, made today, is as follows: He calculated just how far the truck would have to go after it was halted, before it stopped, and went back to that point, which was not far from the entrance to the Livingstone drive. Already the crowd of searchers and sensation hunters had pretty well destroyed any clew that might have been left, but about twenty yards from the gates he found marks in the mud indicating that, not only had the truck been backed to that point, but it had been turned there and headed back toward Oakville and the bay.

Just where it left the road again, if at all, is a question. I believe Halliday has taken a scraping from the wheels and proposes to have it analyzed. He finds something suspicious in it. I cannot say what.

I have spent today reorganizing my household. None of the women, including Clara, are to leave it after nightfall unaccompanied, and although no entrance into any house has yet been attempted, Halliday and I have spent the late afternoon tightening window locks and adding new bolts where they are necessary.

Jane has entirely recovered, and has today resumed work on her tapestry with us a barometer of normality. She has even agreed to dine at the Livingstones tonight, not particularly to my delight.

"Come over and dine," Mrs. Livingstone telephoned, "and let's have a little bridge. I've had the horrors for three days."

"You don't object to my wearing my revolver, as a part of my evening outfit?"

"Everybody's doing it," she said. "This house has been turned into an arsenal."

Later: Doctor Hayward stopped in this evening for a final professional visit to Jane, and on an impulse I showed him Uncle Horace's letter. I may be mistaken, but it seemed to me that, under pretense of reading it a second time, he was playing for time.

"Curious!" he said, when he passed it back to me. "What do you make of it?"

"The last part of it is fairly clear. He was in danger, and knew it."

"But the rest of it?" he said. "What does he say? The wickedness of the idea. What idea?"

"You haven't any opinion on that yourself?"

"No," he said slowly. "I can't say that I have."

The tension, or whatever it was, seemed to relax then. "As a mater of fact," he said, "I thought it was addressed to me, when I commenced it. We'd had a long argument not long before his death, on euthanasia. I believed in putting the unfit out of the world; he didn't. But of course the end of it settles that."

He laughed again, bit the end of a thumb, hesitated, and then got his hat.

"Danger!" he said. "And the police! No, that wasn't for me."

"And you still believe he died of heart disease?"

"It was his heart, all right," he said, and going out, climbed heavily into his car. He seemed abstracted, and made no reply to my good-night.

I can read into this what I like. His manner was not that of a guilty man; on the other hand, it was not entirely natural, either. He was both watchful and self-conscious. And I do not believe he read the letter twice. . . .

One of the evening newspapers tonight prints a photostatic copy of the cipher found in our garage, and offers a prize for its solution.

Edith's memory is shown to have been faulty in only one particular. The cipher, as published reads:

GeLTr, K. 24.

July 23.

Mrs. Livingstone has given me something to think about. . . .

The dinner went off very well. But the bridge was irritating. It is always a mistake to seat four people at a table, and place cards before them, when their minds are full of another and totally different matter.

Nevertheless, the evening was not without a peculiar interest of its own. While Mr. Livingstone took Jane to see his hothouses I had a few moments alone with his wife, and I received what is to me a new angle on the whole mysterious business.

We were in the library, and I was wandering around looking at Livingstone's books. In one corner was a large and well-worn collection of books on psychic subjects, and as I glanced up from them Mrs. Livingstone was watching me, gravely.

"If you do not know what you believe on these matters," I said, "you must certainly know the opinions of others."

"And you?" she said. "Are you still a cynic?"

I turned and faced her.

"I don't know what I am."

"Ah! You have heard the lighthouse story?"

"Yes."

She said nothing for a moment, then:

"What about your new tenant? Your Mr. Bethel? Has he made any complaint?"

"Not yet. As a matter of fact I have talked to him only once."

"And that was—?"

"Mostly about hot water and a beef cube," I admitted. "And the direction in which the house faces. He struck me as an extremely irritable and material type."

"'Irritable and material,'" she repeated thoughtfully. "And yet I suppose you know they are saying that he is using the red lamp."

"It is locked in a closet on the upper floor, Mrs. Livingstone, and I have the key. What is more, I heard that story some time ago, and investigated. So far as I can tell, it has not been disturbed since I put it there. Of course, he may have brought another similar lamp, but that's going rather far, isn't it?"

She picked up some knitting at her elbow and worked at it thoughtfully.

"You have changed since I last talked to you," she said at last. "What has brought about that change, Mr. Porter?"

"A good bit has happened since then."

She looked up at me searchingly.

"Including the lighthouse."

"Including the lighthouse," I agreed, soberly. It was then she put down her knitting.

"Why has he come back?" she asked, watching me intently. "Why is he earth-bound? Have you no idea?"

"I haven't an idea what you mean by earth-bound."

"Just what I appear to mean, and you know it," she said. "You can laugh if you like; Liv does. But I know what I know. There is always a reason when they come back like this. A very good reason."

But beyond that she refused to go. Whether she has an inkling of this "reason" to which she attributes what she refers to as his "coming back" I have no idea.

July 24.

The truck, according to Halliday's analysis, had been driven through heavy leaf mold. But a second drenching rain toward morning, and still continuing, discourages him into the bargain, the cars of searchers and summer tourists alike have made it practically impossible to identify any trail.

He has given his information and the result of the report to Greenough, but that gentleman appears to think he requires no assistance.

Grand Old Man of Football

Underwood & Underwood

Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg.

As slick and bright as one of John D. Rockefeller's shiny dimes and with his brain buzzing with tricks, the "grand old man of American football," Amos Alonzo Stagg, has whipped together his thirty-seventh football eleven at the University of Chicago with as much ardor as he did back in the early nineties.

Prospects for a winning team aren't so bright for Stagg and his Maroon warriors this year, but the last one to admit it is the sixty-six-year-old gray eagle himself.

Out on the practice field day after day, rain or shine, stands the martial figure of Maroon gridiron lore, sans hat and with tousseled locks tossing to and fro as he shouts instructions. Not a mistake escapes his eye and he is just as dynamic as ever.

"Well, I'm at it again and we are going to have another good team this year," he beamed confidently as he talked to his recruits. "We want to win, but, you know, winning isn't everything. It's winning or losing right by clean playing. We haven't as much natural talent this season as last year, but we can make it up by speed and fight."

And that is what he is stressing as his shrill voice rises above the thump of scrimmage.

Time and again he grabs the oval, much the same as when he starred at end on Yale's championship machine in 1888, and demonstrates what he means.

"Oh, I've plenty of tricks in my head," he answered when he was asked if he hadn't run out of them. "You know that is my chief trouble. Ideas? Why, I've so many it is hard to get any of them across. This year I've thought up some new ones, and if they work, if they only work, we're going to score some touchdowns."

Asked how long he intended to remain in football, Stagg merely chuckled and then added:

"Guess I'll be in this game until my teeth fall out."

All Big Ten squads worked through long, hard practices recently amidst cold, rainy weather.

Signals in Spanish Help Texas Eleven

By practicing their Spanish lessons on the gridiron Trinity university football players believe they have found a way to outwit opponents without using the huddle.

The team lines up and the quarterback sings out:

"Singales! Veinte, dos, ocho. Comprendes ustedes?"

The ball is snapped and an end run is made.

The drawback, of course, is that opponents also may be students of Spanish.

Gridder Wears Helmet

Underwood & Underwood

Forrest (Jap) Douds star tackler of the Washington and Jefferson football team, with the odd helmet which he is obliged to wear to protect injuries sustained when his upper jawbone was broken after he was struck by a skyrocket. Douds recovered, but his face isn't "what it used to be," and Head Coach Andy Kerr devised this face and head helmet.

Catcher Tells About Vance's Burning Speed

Catcher De Berry of the Brooklyn team said a few days ago, "I've been catching Dazzy Vance for eight years in the National league and he's an increasing marvel to me every time I go behind the plate. He's so much superior to every pitcher I ever saw I don't see how Vance ever loses a game." Dazzy fanned exactly 200 batters this year. He whiffed only 184 in 1927. His biggest year for strikeouts was 1924, when he turned in 262, and in 1925 he came back to register 221. He has been National league king seven years.

British Golf Improves

British golf has taken a turn for the better. What was believed the most remarkable hole-in-one ever achieved was credited to George Kirby, Southampton professional, who holed out his drive on the 340-yard ninth hole at the Stoneham course. This was declared to be the longest hole on which an ace had been made. E. F. Sales, Sunningdale professional, lowered Bobby Jones' record for that famous course by two strokes. Sales made the circuit in 32-32—64.

NIEMIEC SERVING AS PINCH HITTER

Coach Rockne Keeping His Triple Threat on Bench.

One of Notre Dame's all-American prospects has been gracing the greater part of the present season as a result of Coach Knute K. Rockne's decision to keep Johnny Niemiec, triple threat left half back, out of all games in which the Irish are not pressed to the limit to win.

Niemiec was injured during the latter part of the 1927 season at a time when he was dividing honors in the back field with Christy Flanagan. Flanagan held down the regular left half berth, but Niemic was in action about as often as Christy, and where Christy could only run, Niemiec could run, kick and pass. He looked like one of the greatest prospects in years at Notre Dame, and Rockne was counting on him to take Flanagan's place when the latter was graduated.

Then, just when he appeared to be at his peak, Niemiec was injured. During the winter and spring, Dr. Leslie Clough, Notre Dame trainer, kept Niemiec under his care. When baseball season came around Niemiec was able to hold down his position at third base and gave no sign of being troubled by the old injury. It appeared he would be ready for a big football season this fall.

But when scrimmage started, the injured member was weakened by bumps it received. Fearing he might lose his star permanently, Rockne decided to keep him out of the rough work as much as possible and use him only in critical moments, when good kicking and passing might give the Irish a victory.

The incident recalls the manner in which Rockne employed little Al Parisien during the 1926 season. Parisien was one of Rockne's best quarterbacks that year, and saw plenty of service until he was badly injured in the game with Indiana. It appeared his football career was over, for he was out of the game entirely for some time, and when he did get back in uniform he was kept out of action.

Parisien's value lay in his ability to toss passes accurately with his left hand. Early in the season two passes from him to Niemiec had given the Irish a 6 to 0 win over Northwestern. And so, when Rockne and his men left to play Southern California at Los Angeles the first week in December, Rockne decided at the last minute to take Parisien along. How Parisien begged to get into the game late in the last quarter with Notre Dame trailing the Trojans, and how he used the passes that gave Notre Dame the victory, is football history.

This year Niemiec will be in much the same position, except that he undoubtedly will see more service than did Parisien. He is a fine kicker and an accurate passer. And while he also is a great runner, he will be used almost entirely as a kicker and passer in emergencies.

Kentucky Derby Winner Bears a Charmed Life

The conviction grows that Reigh Count was born for great deeds by the charmed life he seems to have. He escaped a minor fire at Saratoga Springs and a conflagration when the stables on Mr. Hertz' private farm were burned with such a heavy loss in blood stock. That came pretty close to being a racing catastrophe. Reigh Count also recovered from an ailment, following his victory in the Kentucky derby, which would have meant the end of some horses. What else, then, but that his destiny leads to England and the Ascot gold cup! He would be missed in this country, but greater glory awaits him aboard.

Just a Few Years Make Great Deal Difference

Not so many years back Jack Dunn sold Jack Bentley to John McGraw for a sum said to be $72,500. Bentley was an unbeatable pitcher one day a week and a home run-hitting first baseman the other six days. He earned his pay at Baltimore and looked great.

McGraw bought him for a pitcher. He was a southpaw. But he didn't do so well up there. And he wasn't worth $72,500 and a nice salary as a pinch hitter so John McGraw just let him go to Newark. And failing as a pitcher for Walter Johnson he was traded to York, Pa., where he is to be manager and play first base and pitch.

New Endurance Record

Records were broken recently at the University of California at Los Angeles, when S. Chotiner scored 493 points in the physical education classification tests required of all entering freshmen, shattering the old record of 490 points set by Jim Hudson in 1925. Events in which Chotiner scored his high total are the baseball throw, long dive, standing broad jump, the dip, dodging, quarter-mile run, and the football punt. Chotiner getting off a record kick of 60 yards.

DR. CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. POULTRY

CLEAN EGGS ARE MOST PROFITABLE

Clean, spotless eggs bring an average of three cents per dozen more than dirty eggs and at times an even greater premium is paid. When feed is high and eggs plentiful this premium is oftentimes the margin between the cost of production and the selling price. Proper housing of the flock and careful handling of the eggs are necessary in order to secure clean eggs.

"Shape, size and color of eggs as well as texture of shell are determined by breeding and feeding; but, to have clean eggs, one must have a clean house and the eggs must be carefully handled after they are laid," says C. F. Parrish, extension poultryman at the North Carolina State college. "The eggs should be gathered once a day at least and more often if possible. One soiled egg will soil all of those in the nest."

Poultry houses should be of modern construction with the dropping boards placed away from the nests. These boards should be cleaned every day as well as the running board in front of the nests. Good, clean litter should be provided and this should be changed as often as is necessary. Hens living in dirty houses and laying eggs in dirty nests will soil every egg in the nest. According to Mr. Parrish, this automatically cuts one-quarter of a cent from the price received for each egg.

Mr. Parrish also states that persons handling the eggs should be careful of their hands. Sweaty hands gather a certain amount of dust which adheres to the eggs, causing them to have a mottled, dirty appearance. If the hens have a clean house and the eggs are handled carefully, every poultry raiser in the state should get the added premium for his eggs, he states.

Henhouse and Roosts Are Crowded Too Much

The henhouse and roosts which accommodated several hundred small chicks last spring are not sufficient for the birds which have increased many times in size within the past three to four months. Crowding causes night sweating and the pullets therefore get chilled when they leave the house in the early morning in search of feed. This means congested lungs and air passages which eventually develop into colds and roup. It would be better to send one-half the flock to market and adequately care for the remainder than to attempt to keep more than one has accommodations for.

Dry Poultry House Is of Great Importance

A dry poultry house is important. Conditions outside may be unfavorable but with dry quarters there is little danger. To secure these conditions the floor should be elevated and so constructed that dampness cannot arise beneath. It is customary to put in coarse gravel or broken stone, then on this a layer of cement, then heavy roofing paper, then a two-inch layer of cement troweled smooth. If this is allowed to become thoroughly dry before putting in the chickens there will be no danger from that source. Some prefer a board floor, which gives good results, but it means a harbor for vermin.

Poultry Notes

Pullets develop large, wide and deep bodies more readily when fed minerals.

Trying to get eggs out of a scrub hen is like trying to get music out of a cornstalk fiddle.

There is a market every day for poultry, but the best market is the co-operative market.

• • •

A cull pullet is simply a pullet that does not exhibit the characteristics of a well-bred and well-developed bird of her variety and age.

• • •

Neither blood nor management will take the place of an abundance of the right sort of feed.

• • •

Where birds of different ages are running together, more care must be taken not to mistake lack of development for lack of size and vigor.

The henhouse floor should be dry. A concrete or board floor is more sanitary than a dirt floor. Above all things, old dirt and litter should be replaced with fresh material.

Are your cockerels using up valuable ground and feed and otherwise crowding your pullets? Get rid of them.

Remember that the hens which lay the golden eggs are the ones that produce them when they bring the highest prices.

The adult turkey is affected very little by the gapeworm, but acts as a carrier of the parasite by infecting the premises with worm eggs which are picked up by the chickens.

With pullets that have not reached full development, it is more difficult to tell which of them are constitutionally deficient and which, perhaps, simply slow in development than in the case of mature fowls.

Unless a personal demonstration of the desirable characteristics of fowls can be had, pictures help, for it is of little use to say simply that a bird's body should be deep unless comparison with other birds shows the difference between deep and shallow bodies.

The car, considerably damaged, was saved.

High School NOTES

In losing the traditional "big" game Friday, November 2, to Palo Alto, by a score of 7-0, the Sequoia gridders are tied for second place in the league. The Burlingame panthers, after being tied by San Jose, are also tied, and if San Jose ties Palo Alto, there will be a triple tie for first place.

The Palo Alto game was won by one of the few successful passes, a 30-yard pass turning the trick. Burnett Dirks made the best showing for the local team. The last game of the season will be played this Friday, November 9, and a victory means that the Cherokees will still be in the race for the championship.

Friday night, the light weight basketball teams will play San Mateo on the Bearcat court, in the second round of the series. The twenties are actively in the race for the league basketball championship.

John Phillip Sousa, famous band master and composer, spoke before the assembly Tuesday, prior to his concert in Palo Alto. He also led the Sequoia band in his own composition, "The Stars and Stripes Forever." He was secured through the efforts of Miss Genevieve Wurzbach, English instructor, who in company with several other teachers, gave Mr. Sousa a luncheon in honor of his birthday.

Cyril Clemens, cousin of the writer, Mark Twain, spoke before the assembly Thursday, November 1, and was well received by the students, who greatly appreciated his humorous recollections of the life of his famous relative. In addition to telling many interesting facts about the life of Mark Twain, Mr Clemens recalled humorous incidents in his life. Mr. Clemens is president of the Mark Twain Society of Webster Groves.

Jack Lunday, national sales manager of the United States Silver Fox Farms, has located at San Carlos in order to be in a position to take care of the large volume of sales of breeding stock which he feels will be possible in this district for his company, one of the largest breeders of silver foxes (Roosevelt strain) in the world. After careful study, his organiaztion has found through local demonstration that the climatic conditions on the peninsula are ideal for raising the silver fox, which brings the highest price of any fur on the market. The silver fox is a hardy animal and easily raised at a cost of a few cents a day.

Ancient Rome Gave World Money System

The startling contrast between Rome in the years of its greatest conquests under the Caesars and the world in the period of the Dark Ages which followed forms the main theme in an interesting illustrated folder distributed by the First National Bank as a part of the history of Money and Civilization which the local institution have prepared for its friends in this community.

Pointing out that while it may seem a long step from Roman victories to modern banking, there nevertheless is a very real connection, Mr. Edward Harrison, of the bank, yesterday emphasized the importance of past events when viewed from the standpoint of the present business and financial systems of the world.

To most people the story of Rome's rise and fall as an empire in the early days is well known. They also are familiar with the manner in which the barbarians, overruning the once powerful nation, wiped out all traces of its advanced civilization within a comparatively short time.

That early Rome had developed a comprehensive system of banking and of coinage is not brought out in most courses in history, however. Nor is the influence that the policies of Charlemagne the Great, had upon modern currency presented in the usual high school instruction.

These hapenings of years long past have been described in this unique and intensely interesting series of folders. To supplement the text, handsomely executed color illustrations and attractive pen-and ink drawings have been user throughout the series. An immense amount of research work is evident in the enlightening character of the text

The person who can pass a test in the fundamentals of our everyday economic life as brought out in the story of Money and Civilization may be credited with being well informed in one field of knowledge that touches us all, but of which most people have only a very slight knowledge. The old Romans, filling up the capital city of the Empire with great treasures secured by conquering other nations, realized that a stabilized currency was needed—and coins stamed with the head of Caeser were accepted without question throughout the empire. There is a real significance in these cherished old museum pieces which survive today—for all through the Dark Ages, when civilization had a setback, coins of this charcter were hoarded by people who realized that world progress bring a medium of exchange ly Rome pointed the way things of great importance in our commercial and
